Why invest in CIS SPECIAL OPPORTUNITIES

- Only invests in very carefully researched “one off” opportunities where we have identified a profound pricing anomaly, or where we anticipate a major corporate or sovereign event. While awaiting these opportunities, the portfolio is in cash or short term bonds.
- The only Special Opportunities strategy that offers daily NAV and liquidity
- Offers a unique, deep knowledge of CIS markets without a risky exposure to local currencies or local counterparties.
- Liquidity, brokerage, custody and administration is handled by Leonteq. Zurich - a major Swiss bank

Executive Summary

- ⇒ The goal of the CIS Special Opportunities is to exploit event-driven, short-term opportunities arising from extreme volatility and the misinterpretation of news and events in the Strategy's core markets of Russia, Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Azerbaijan.
- ⇒ The Strategy targets an annual return in excess of 30% by focusing on price volatility of individual liquid assets that have direct exposure to the core markets and that are affected by a particular event.
- ⇒ Investment team members have deep and broad experience investing in the core markets since the mid-1990's, and have demonstrated skills in rapidly and accurately interpreting events and their impact on asset prices. This has resulted in a track record of highly profitable results in over 70% of trades.
- ⇒ The Strategy invests in equities, bonds, derivatives and cash and equivalents. It invests only in U.S. dollar- and euro-denominated assets and deals solely with major global banks, thus eliminating local currency, counterparty trade and settlement risks.
- ⇒ G&G Private Finance and Maximus Capital are both seed investors in the CIS Special Opportunities, as are the investment team members.

Investment Strategy

- The Strategy's core markets -- Russia, Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Azerbaijan -- regularly present compelling investment opportunities in both the equity and fixed income markets. Stocks and bonds in these countries often see sharp falls in response to news events, followed quickly by corrections that can be multiples of the original market pricing as investors begin to fully comprehend the impact of the event and price it correctly.
- This volatility often stems from an information disconnect, as Western investors can lack the ability to rapidly and accurately interpret and act on events. Our investment team members, having deep knowledge of these markets, identify the mis-pricings that offer the potential for double-digit short-term returns.
- Historically, we identify a few such opportunities per year in bull markets, and several per month during crisis times, which produce greater volatility and a much greater frequency of event mis-pricings. While awaiting these event-driven trades, assets will be in cash or in high-yielding carry trades.

Investment Case for Core Markets

⇒ Russia: The country's equities and debt remain undervalued and volatile, in part because Western investors are fearful of the ongoing tension with Ukraine and the ruble's recent drop. The RTSI index fell from 1100 to nearly 600 in November before rebounding to almost 1100 by early May, and Russian CDS spreads have also shown a lot of volatility lately. This volatility is exacerbated by Western misinterpretation of news events. Sanctions that are to expire in July will mean even more volatility.

⇒ Ukraine: Debt restructuring plans have attracted attention from investors, creating significant volatility around Ukrainian debt securities, which are often undervalued. The country's default risk dropped from near 100% to 48% in a single day earlier this year, but has since spiked amid expectations of a 7.5% GDP contraction this year.

⇒ Kazakhstan: Despite strong credit metrics, sovereign and corporate debt issuance are rare; last year the country sold dollar bonds for the first time since 2000. Also, investors tend to undervalue Kazakh debt. Meanwhile, the government said it won't devalue the tenge this year, which will present more mis-pricings and volatility to exploit.

⇒ Azerbaijan: Investors reacted favorably to the country's first eurobond in 2014, and to a March 2015 bond issue from SOCAR. Still, Azerbaijani debt remains very undervalued compared to countries with similar economies, and compared to other nations rated BBB-. Depending on timing and liquidity constraints, we think it possible to gain a spread premium of over 400 basis points.

Representative Investment: MTS, VIP

OPPORTUNITY

- Starting July 2015 we started to accumulate short positions in MTS, Vimpelcom and Sistema (holding company for MTS) stocks with an expectation that these companies will be negatively affected by either US/EU sanctions, Ukraine nationalization attempts, internal Russian oligarch infighting.
- VIP entry point for the short position was 5.3 and MTS was 8.2; both stocks trade on NYSE

ANALYSIS

- We anticipated that due to increased tensions between the US and Russia, these large Russian companies would be viewed as a target to apply economic pressure.
- We began to analyze the situation and discuss the probability of negative events surrounding these companies.
- On 13 Aust the US DOJ announced a $1bn asset freeze against VIP and stock began to drop.

THE TRADE

- We accumulated the short positions in VIP and MTS with an average of $4.9 and $7.8 respectively, with 2x leverage.
- We exited the VIP trade at around 1.91, booking a profit of 61%.
- MTS shares have also fallen but we continue to hold this position with an expectation of another event.

Representative Investment: Ukraine sovereign bonds

OPPORTUNITY

- Following the restructuring of Ukreximbank, the Ministry of Finance embarked on a restructuring of sovereign eurobonds.
- In the background of an economy weakened by war, while remaining relevant from a geopolitical perspective, Ukraine saw an opportunity to restructure its national debt.
- Following a declaration of “imminent default” bonds dropped to high 40s

ANALYSIS

- The situation seemed to be an almost identical replay to the Ukreximbank bond restructuring, but more complex since much larger sums were involved.
- Having visited Kiev and met with Ministry of Finance and the US state department, we became increasingly convinced that the default and “40% haircut” threats were exaggerated.
- As expected, negotiations proved difficult and the parties settled on 20% haircut and extension.

THE TRADE

- We started buying Ukraine bonds, mostly short duration in June and July averaging at 54, and continued to accumulate while both sides threatened to walk away from the deal.
- Post restructuring the bonds rallied to low 80s, but we exited the trade fully in mid 70s, averaging 34% gain per position.

URAIINE 9.25% 24/07/17

Representative Investment: Ukreximbank

OPPORTUNITY

- ↳ Ukreximbank bonds have fallen during late 2014 and early 2015 amid geopolitical tensions, a falling currency and a weak Ukrainian economy.
- ↳ The bank's bonds are seen as sovereign debt due to cross-default clauses. The government has been deciding whether to repay or restructure the bonds.
- ↳ After a declaration of "imminent default" and "likely 50% haircut," an 8.375% Ukreximbank bond maturing in April 2015 fell to low 50s in March.

ANALYSIS

- ↳ We strongly believed investors were overstating the possibility of a Ukreximbank default and the fallout from a restructuring.
- ↳ We also think it very unlikely that the IMF and EU will abandon Ukraine after their statement that they will "fight and die" for European values.
- ↳ As for the April 2015 bond itself, because of our sources and knowledge of the market, we felt a 50% haircut or default were both very unlikely.

THE TRADE

- ↳ We started buying the April 2015 bonds in early April at a median price of 54.
- ↳ On April 27, the government finally made a reasonable restructuring proposal, which extended maturity by three months, and bondholders accepted. Prices rose to the mid-70s.
- ↳ We exited at 71 shortly after the restructuring, booking a profit of about 31% on the trade.

UKREXIMBANK 9.75% 22/01/2025

Representative Investment: Alliance Oil

OPPORTUNITY

- Last November, Alliance bonds maturing in March 2015 dropped from nearly 100 to the low 80s, following rumors that the company would have difficulty paying the bonds.
- After some reassurance of management, the price soon recovered to the mid-90s.
- Earlier this year, a few weeks before the bonds were to mature, the company announced it couldn't repay and threatened to default. This sent the bond prices back down, falling to the low 50s.

ANALYSIS

- The company said it was low on cash and that international sanctions and other factors were impacting its business.
- After consulting our industry contacts, we concluded that management was exaggerating the negatives regarding its ability to repay the March 2015 bonds.
- Our analysis concluded that Alliance had sufficient cash reserves and that their product was sold mostly domestically, and hence was unaffected by sanctions.

THE TRADE

- We started buying the bonds at about 55.
- Shortly before the bonds' maturity date in March, Alliance announced a restructuring which paid 20% in cash on maturity and extended the bonds by four years at a price of 70.
- We exited the trade at 83.71, booking a profit of more than 50%.
- The chart below shows a similar price drop for the company's 2019 bonds, which may present a similar investment opportunity.

Investment Detail: Carry Trades

- ↗ While awaiting event-driven trades, assets will be in cash or in short-term, high-yielding carry trades, targeting returns of 2% to 5% over a time period of a few days.
- ↗ These trades will involve buying ADRs/GDRs or dollar-/euro-denominated bonds shortly before the payout date for a dividend or coupon, respectively.
- ↗ Such trades can be profitable because, due in part to the information disconnect, certain bonds and equities in our core markets do not respond the same way as bonds and equities do in the West. In the West, ahead of a coupon or dividend payout, security prices will drop slightly to reflect the pending payment.
- ↗ Certain CIS securities do not follow this pattern: their price does not dip ahead of a coupon or dividend payment.
- ↗ Knowing how to identify such securities – as our investment team members do – allows for small but significant profits, in a very short time period.

Risk Management: Basics

- ⇒ The investment team of the CIS Special Opportunities takes numerous steps to ensure that risk is properly managed and monitored:
  - ⇒ No single position can exceed 10% of total assets.
  - ⇒ The investment team holds weekly meetings to discuss every position in detail.
  - ⇒ Additional special meetings are convened whenever news breaks that impacts any portfolio position, or when any position makes a significant move.
  - ⇒ The Strategy invests only in U.S. dollar- or euro-denominated securities, whether equities or bonds, which removes any local currency risk.
  - ⇒ The Strategy deals only with major global banks, thereby eliminating counterparty trade and settlement risks.

Risk Management: Limits

- ↪ Whenever a new position is initiated, the investment team sets applicable limits, whether there is price appreciation or not.
- ↪ One limit is a target price, and we will exit the position when that target is met.
- ↪ The other is a target date, typically within a few weeks from the price move that precipitated the position. If the security price fails to correct by the time the target date is reached, we exit the position.
